MEMORANDUM FOR:

At  MAG discussed ways in which to expand its own contact with employees and to find out what kinds of Agency problems weigh most heavily on others. It was pointed out that at the end of the Managerial Grid (first week of the Mid-Career Course) the participants are divided into groups to consider the problems of their home directorates. The problems and recommended solutions are recorded on briefing boards which are used by each directorate group to report to the whole class. MAG would like to review these suggestions on a regular basis starting immediately. It is possible that on occasion we might wish to talk to some of the courses in their latter weeks about the ideas they expressed at the end of the Grid.

Not only would this procedure give MAG a regular stimulus, but it would have the added benefit of showing the Mid-careerists that their suggestions are being considered by a body which can send them upward in the organization. Will you help us clear this with OTR?

MAG Co-chairman
